Touring to a theatre near YOU!

As the old saying goes: "Hit the road Jack"; and that's exactly what Vancouver Actor Stefano Giulianetti has been doing (only his name is not Jack).

Since January of this year, Giulianetti, along with fellow performers Josue Laboucane, Tanya Podlozniuk and stage manager Dorothy Jenkins has been performing Axis Theatre's newest TYA touring show The Emperor's New Threads. Written by Melody Anderson and Peter Anderson, the visually stunning show features over 30 masks, 15 costumes and of course, Stefano Giulianetti!!!

While most performances are in elementary schools across BC, there are several chances for die-hard Giulianetti fans to catch the show in theatres across the lower mainland (see pull-out section adjacent). The story is based on the popular Hans Christian Andersen fable "The Emperor's New Clothes" which sees two swindlers sell an invisible outfit to a vain emperor for his royal procession...so you won't want to miss THIS parade!

IS THERE ANYTHING HE CAN'T DO?

After a mere weeklong workshop last December, Actor Stefano Giulianetti staggers the imagination by adding Aerial Silks (Tissu) to his seemingly endless repertoire of stage skills**. The flexible entertainer will be using this aerial technique along with juggling, balancing and exceptional acting to play the part of an elderly man -and former circus performer- in Kaleidoscope Theatre's The Boy Who Learned To Fly. The old man teaches the ways of the circus to his video-game addicted teenage neighbour and the lessons take flight, literally! The new play by Barbara Poggemiller will premiere and tour schools in Victoria before taking the stage at the 2007 Vancouver International Children's Festival in May.

** For a complete list of special skills, simply audition Giulianetti for any role, sit back and be amazed.
