NEW AGENT, NEW START FOR GIULIANETTI

As the traditional summer hiatus approaches, many actors are either taking time off as reward for a year's work well done, or taking time off to skip out on their taxes. But while many rush to put aside their craft, the young and exceptionally talented Vancouver actor Stefano Giulianetti is gearing up to make a fresh start.

While last year can be counted as a resounding success for the accomplished actor, who earned credits as a Latin fugitive on the TV series Millennium, as a Mountain Patrolman in two Kokanee Beer commercials, as well as for Tony 'n' Tina's

Brilliant Actor Stefano Giulianetti

Wedding and a production at the Chan Centre, Giulianetti says he is determined to make '98 even better yet.

With newly acquired agent Connie Hardie, auditioning rates will no doubt be on the rise, especially after the second quarter of the year, when Giulianetti's head shots, taken by well-known photographer Nicholas Seiflo, will be available.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Dear Editor:

I found last month's article "A City in Tears" recounting the turmoil Stefano Giulianetti caused when he quit Tony n' Tina's Wedding a bit harsh and unforgiving, after all, we all have to move on. -SG (Seattle)

Dear SG, I think you are right.

Dear Editor: Did I see Stefano Giulianetti in a recent Guess Jeans ad? -GS (New York)

Dear GS, No.

Did someone say "AWA"?

That time is again upon us: another batch of actors prepares another monologue and another scene to showcase at the Actor's Working Academy.

Among the casting directors judging this year's hopefuls are Kristen DeWolfe, and Michelle Allen.

But the real excitement is mounting in anticipation of a performance by handsome Vancouver actor Stefano Giulianetti, pairing up with a former fellow student to present what promises to be yet another stunning performance. (He has opted to do both a scene and a monologue, so as to overwhelm the judges.)

Stefano says he looks forward to seeing casting director De Wolfe again (who recently cast him in two Kokanee Beer commercials), and hopes she will make him win the contest.
