STEFANO TO TOUR LIKE IT WAS 1999

According to reliable sources, a high profile, high budget Francophone touring company was rumored to have offered a part to gifted Vancouver actor, Stefano Giulianetti. The part, apparently, had already been offered to him a year ago after a brilliant audition but the busy actor had to turn it down due to prior engagements.

While the part calls for a young teenage boy, and Stefano has been known mostly for his work in older age groups, he said he would relish the opportunity to “get back to my roots, sharpen my crayons” and “re-acquaint myself with my inner child”. When asked how his French skills were, Stefano simply replied “Oui” ...the sign of a true artiste. Although we cannot divulge the Theatre Company’s name at this time (heh-heghm-Theatre la Seizieme), we do know that the tour will be an extensive one, spanning as far as Ontario and the Yukon from February to early April. Best of luck Stefano, and don’t forget to bring your parka!

WORKSHOPS GALORE

-Does he ever quit ?!

After a rewarding laborious year, one would think that most actors would sit back and enjoy the royalty cheques, but fresh-faced young actor Stefano Giulianetti is on the go. Workshop after workshop, talented but humble Giulianetti is determined to hone his skills. And while his adoring public has been overjoyed with his work thus far, the talented young actor still sees growth opportunities. His latest workshops have included a workshop with the well-established casting director Coreen Mayrs -whom you may recall cast Giulianetti in the TV series "Millennium"- and a voice-over workshop with industry legend Sonja Bakker. Using these workshops as a launchpad Stefano hopes to have a voice demo tape ready by the new year. So keep your ears peeled, he may be coming to a radio frequency near you.
